WriteGirl presents over 50 creative writing workshops and events each year on a variety of genres including journalism, songwriting, screenwriting, poetry, fiction and more.

The annual WriteGirl Journalism Workshop helps girls learn the fundamentals of journalism, including writing a lede, interviewing sources, determining reliable information, fact-checking and more. They'll also get an overview of the various types of traditional and digital media platforms.

Special guests will include prominent women journalists who will share their insights, career experiences and provide advice for young writers interested in pursuing a journalism career.

WriteGirl alumnae working in the journalism field will also join in at the workshop, offering both their expertise and encouragement to the teen writers. Many of them point to the annual WriteGirl Journalism Workshop as a pivotal event that helped set them on their career path.

Brilliant Futures for GIRLS

ABOUT WRITEGIRL

The challenges facing young girls in Los Angeles are enormous. WriteGirl participants come from primarily high-density schools and low-income neighborhoods with limited resources. Many face intense challenges, such as unstable home environments, violence, clinical depression, suicide attempts and homelessness. 1 in 4 teen girls in California will become pregnant, and 1 in 6 teens in the LA Unified School District will never graduate.

WriteGirl is a counterbalance in the lives of its mentees, providing a sanctuary for these girls to work one-on-one with professional women writers and share their experiences, ideas and dreams through creative writing.

WriteGirl is about transformation. When girls are given the space, time and support to be themselves and say what they feel, surrounded by creative and caring mentors, they excel and their confidence soars. WriteGirl fosters creativity, critical thinking, communication skills, and unbridled boldness through monthly workshops, public readings, mentorship and publications.

For 20 years, WriteGirl has guided 100% of seniors in the Core Mentoring Program to graduate from high school and enroll in college, many as the first in their families to do so. WriteGirl alumnae who may have once believed college was out of reach, are now succeeding academically and professionally all over the world.
